It's so great to hear from you! Archie is thriving right now with his "puppy sister" at home! He loves to run around our big backyard and roll around in one specific spot in the grass :D He hates sharing the bed with anyone so he sleeps on the couch at night and goes upstairs for his "naps" every morning. He is a pain to get out of bed once he is awake though! He loves to takes walks and gets so upset when we can't. He also learned how to give hugs last year and has to have one every morning and every time I come home from work. He is such a sweet boy! I have been exposing him to new people since I brought him home and he isn't as afraid to approach people as he used to be. He does still use all of his commands especially when he gets into trouble here at the house. He is so spoiled and I love him to pieces!!!!

Arlo is doing wonderful!! My husband and I were just talking yesterday about sending you a note and asking you to pass word on if you still have contact with the prison. If you could let the gentleman know who worked with Arlo, how grateful we are of the job that he did. Also to let him know that Arlo has found his fur-ever home full of laughter, love, and lots of play!

Maisy and her new owner have bonded very quickly. They are doing well.

Sammy found a home with his new little girlfriend. His new Dad had a fence installed just for him so he can run around with her. He was a picky eater in LOCI because his previous owners cooked rice, turkey, vegetable stew for him. Adopters wrote: Sammy is eating the food that you sent with us. He also is eating Purina dry food just for small dogs. He ate some canned dog food with chicken. He loves a dog treat called "Pupperoni." He barks at the cats sometimes. Lucy is better today, not so much barking at Sammy. I think that they will do better once the fence is up and they can spend more time together in the yard.
