Adopters sent us a picture of Louie looking happy.

I'm betting Scottie got some turkey on Thanksgiving.

Maisy with her new mom.

Brutus is so very loving and sweet. We love his smile. We think he is so silly! Definitely a lap dog - he doesn't know he's too big for some of his shenanigans and we aren't going to tell him. Typical TV night is Emily half on the couch and half on the coffee table while I lay twisted in the corner; Brutus sprawls across us both. He also loves to bury his big nose wherever he can - blanket, couch corner, human elbow.

Enjoying the new addition to our family. Toto is so lovable and loves to be hugged and take walks.

This was result of Thor breaking out of his cage and having some fun in his foster home before PUPP training. Next month will show you Thor's progress.

Lucy is well loved and likes to snuggle.

Barney's before and after photos. His adopter fell in love with him very quickly. His new mom and dad are home all day with him.

Zeke loves playing ball in the backyard. He also enjoys tugging on rope toys and squeaking toys. We've found loud noises make him pretty anxious but he seems to find relief in his crate if things get too loud. He forgets how big he is sometimes and tries to perch on the back of the couch like Oliver and Binx do, lol. Sometimes he gets nervous around new people but he is always well behaved and warms up to people pretty quickly. He is potty trained very well. I think he's taught Oliver a few things! Overall he seems to be adjusting well. He got to experience his first party a couple of weeks ago and he will get to experience his first road trip next month! He knows sit very well and listens when told no. We're all very happy he has joined our family. He has been a great addition and we have plenty of hugs to give. He seems to like that. Thanks!

Capri probably looking at a bird with her new Dad.
